

ART THERAPY AND THE BEREAVED

Mara E. Cicaloni

1999

Abstract

This thesis focuses on the use of art therapy as a therapeutic modality in the treatment of grief. Current perspectives and theories relating to mourning and loss are reviewed. Art therapy as an intervention with a variety of populations is discussed. To amplify art therapy's usefulness in ameliorating issues relating to grief, a case history is presented of a bereavement art therapy group for people with developmental disabilities.